HARLEQUIN SOLUTIONS :: 2 Exmoor Street, London W10 6BD

Web Developer [February 2000 - October 2002]

Harlequin Solutions are the leading provider of content management applications used by organisations to interact online with their customers, employees and partners. They offer services from designing and building static websites to fully customised content management solutions controlling dynamic and database driven websites. Their clients are mainly public sector organisations as well as a variety of private sector clients.

I worked as a developer as part of a small team responsible for all of the browser based work produced by Harlequin Solutions. I used Photoshop to produce designs working closely with the client to develop a final approved design. Cross platform and cross browser code was then developed and tested and templates built by hand using html ready to be integrated into content management application. I was responsible for applying html, javascript and css to developed asp code.

I scanned and retouched all artwork and used Photoshop to develop original artwork for use in both Harlequin Solution and client websites.

I was solely responsible for all print design and production using Quark XPress and working with print providers when large professional print runs were required. Designed all exhibition work and approved proofs and final production from print supplier.
